INTRODUCTION

INSIGHTS INTO PACIFIC BUSINESSES

The COVID-19 pandemic has caused a global health emergency and an economic slowdown impacting millions of small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs) around the world, including the Pacific region.

Key industries such as tourism, agriculture and production which are central to local Pacific economies, continued to be impacted by COVID-19 and corresponding border closures, shipping disruptions, and cashflow throughout 2021.

To understand the ongoing impacts of COVID-19 on the Pacific's private sector, the Pacific Trade Invest (PTI) Network commissioned Fifth Quadrant, an independent research agency, to run a regular survey of SMEs across the Pacific region.

It has been a long road and the regular PTI Pacific Business Monitor surveys aim to provide governments, donors and stakeholders with valuable data on how businesses in the Pacific are coping.

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

THROUGHOUT 2021, COVID-19 HAS CONTINUED TO ADVERSELY IMPACT BUSINESSES AND COMMUNITIES IN THE PACIFIC, THOUGH POSITIVE SENTIMENTS HAVE GROWN NOTICEABLY THROUGHOUT THE YEAR.

As the second year of the global pandemic unfolded, Pacific businesses continued to be significantly impacted by severe economic challenges, such as international border restrictions, uncertain market conditions and global trade disruptions.

With many businesses in the Pacific relying on revenue generated from tourism and international trade, the majority of survey respondents consistently faced significant decline in revenue throughout the year. Encouragingly, the latter part of the year indicated a positive shift and those reporting revenue decline began to decrease.

Furthermore, the proportion of operational businesses also increased from 70 per cent in April to 84 per cent in November. This mirrors improving sentiments across community wellbeing, personal financial situations and mental health.

MORE BUSINESSES IN THE PACIFIC HAVE DIVERSIFIED AS A MEANS OF REDUCING THE IMPACT OF THE PANDEMIC ON THEIR BUSINESS THROUGHOUT 2021.

To remain operational, Pacific businesses increasingly embraced diversification of product and service offerings and pivoted to focus on selling online throughout 2021. By the end of the year, half of all businesses surveyed reported a shift towards a diversified product offering, and over one-third reported a pivot towards ecommerce.

While the number-one need for financial support declined throughout 2021, calls for assistance in accessing new markets, implementing ecommerce, upskilling staff, updating technology and refining business models, grew significantly.

This data provides governments, donors and stakeholders with valuable insights on what support Pacific businesses are seeking.
